PREAMBLE

The General Studies Programme is designed to enable a university student know something about the areas of knowledge that his normal university programme may not touch at all. Thus, the Course on the Nigerian Government and Economy is designed for students whose programmes concentrate on aspects of knowledge that has nothing to do directly with the politics and economics development of Nigeria. Such students in this University include those in the Faculty of Science, Technology, Medicine and other Science-based programmes. Those studying some liberal Arts, Law and Languages are also included because of their limited or on exposure to politic and the economy of the country through their normal programme.

Thus, the primary aim of the General Studies Programme, including this course, is to produce a broad-based educated person who has a working knowledge of many field of endeavor besides his/her area of specialization. Such an educated person is able to deal with the moral, political, economic, cultural, technological and other issues that confront his/her society, and is capable of making appropriate value judgments concerning these issues. In particular, the course on the Nigerian Government and Economy is designed to enable graduates of this university, who would otherwise have been ignorant of the governance and economic development of the country. Be well informed about these aspects as well as to realize how these aspects relate to his/her own economic, social and political pursuits. This is where the relevance of the course lies. This is why going through the course, and indeed the General Studies Programme, is more than scoring marks towards earning degree.
